The turnip fly, which everywhere visits and feeds upon the first leaves of the young turnip, is a small, black, jumping beetle, and is often called the petrated in Leadville was planned and turnip flea, and sometimes Black Jack. | carried out by a woman living on East The beetle feeds only on the young | Second street. Out of regard for the ground, or until it is in the rough, it is safe from much further harm from the insect. The best means, therefore, of guarding against injury by the beetle is to have the soil rich and in the best condition to push the plants along strong and rapidly from the first. In our own practice we have found that dusting the plants as soon as they make their appearance with fine air-slaked lime, wood ashes, or with plaster (gypsum), has the effect to protect the leaves to a great extent, while it in no way injures or checks their growth. These remedies are very generally recognized and applied. It is true that the insects are not wholly deterred from their attacks by the application of these substances, and, if the stand is a poor one, it may be destroyed in spite of all efforts to save it. A thick seeding is desirable, and then, if the plants come well and the powder is applied as soon as they are out of the ground, and repeated as were thrown open and the windows often as necessary to keep the leaves covered, a sufficient number for a good crop can usually be brought to perfection. As often as rains wash the powder off the plant it must be redusted, and kept covered until in the rough leaf. It is best to apply the dust in the morning when the plants are moist with dew, or otherwise to have one person go forward and sprinkle them, while another follows scattering the

An Extraordinary Eye.

There was an occurrence in Northern Liberties yesterday which beyond doubt has no parallel in any known history. While John Daniel, or Hughes, a negro, better known as "Pop-Eyed-John," was walking along the street, his right eye popped out and fell down on his cheek. It hung there for several minutes, and John was frightened out of his wits for fear he had lost his eye. He laid upon the ground and gave vent to his grief in loud groans, and while he was struggling around the eye quietly resumed its position in the socket, and to John's great surprise and happiness he could see from it as well as ever. The gentleman who reported the occurrence to us says that it was witnessed by seventy-five or eighty people.-Columbus (Ga.) Enquirer.

The Dollar of 1804.

In the recent sales at Bangs', in New York, the most valuable specimen sold was a silver dollar of 1804, which brought $740. It was a well-preserved coin, and was pronounced genuine by experts. There has been some discussion among collectors as to the 1804 dollar recently, and it has been asserted that some of the coins bearing that date and prized by proud owners had been altered by clever manipulation from earlier dates. It was said also that absolute counterfeits had been placed in the hands of collectors by designing persons, and that the really genuine 1804's could be counted on the fingers of one hand. The dollar of 1804 weighed 412) grains. The coin that was sold in New York belonged to a Baltimore collector, and has been for some time in the hands of a well-known Philadelphia numismatist. It is said to have come from Vienna, but how it found its way there no one is able to tell. It is in splendid condition. The price expected was at least $1,500 (some predicted $2,000), but it is probable that recent publications relative to restrikes and alterations weakened to some extent the confidence of collectors According to the best authorities there was more than one restrike of the 1804 dollar. One was made by an employe, and the coins were recovered with the exception of two. What became of these is not known. They were distinguished from the genuine by not having lettering on their edges. Another restrike was made some time in 1840 at the request of the Pennsylvania Bank, one of whose foreign customers wanted to complete his collection. Only three were struck, of which one went abroad, another was obtained by a collector of that day, and the third is missing. Any one of these restrikes would sell at $400 if its pedigree were established.

A collector said last night that, judging from the number of 1804 dollars that are coming to light, they can not be so rare as some people think. says that if they turn up as rapidly in the next ten years as they have in the last ten the 1804 dollar will cease to be the rarest of American dollars and the 1858 will take its place. The latter never got into circulation and the mint books are silent as to silver dollars in that year, but eighty or ninety proof coins were struck and most of these are in the hands of collectors. They sold ten years ago for from $10 to $15 each, but now they bring $35 or $40 and a proof set of the silver coinage of that cared for as all fine stock should be, but | year is worth from $40 to $50 .- Philadelphia Times.

A Fireman Fooled.

If parties interested we will suppress the a turnip crop can be carried through names, but we cannot do so with the the first week after it is out of the story. Among the Central station fire laddies is a middle-aged man who has been married for some years. He is a jolly good fellow and liked by all the members of the fire department. It appears, however, that this man has a bad fault which he could not overcome -perhaps he did not want to-notwithstanding that he was often persuaded to do so. He very seldom slept at his own home, which was near the fire station, preferring to lie down with his fellow-firemen. His wife often entreated him to sleep at home, but he refused. At last, finding that persuasion was useless, Mrs. - took a few of the firemen into her confidence and told them of a scheme she had under way, by which her husband could be brought to time. Everything connected with the scheme was kept quiet. One night near the end of last week the cries of a woman were heard on upper State street. In a few moments the doors pushed up. The firemen turned out and of course were surprised to see Mrs. - on the street screaming at the top of her voice. Her husband ran toward her and, greatly alarmed, asked her what was the matter. She replied excitedly that there was a man in the house under her bed. The husband rushed into the house with blood in his eyes, determined to scalp the intruder. Examination, however, proved that the bird had flown. The house was searched, but the villian who had can be destroyed by the use of lime dared to enter his house was nowhere eight pounds, and slake it in a pail of sleeps at his home nightly, in ignowater, and when it has settled pour off | rance of the little joke that was played

Sale of a Famous Trotting Stallion.

The telegraphic announcement made a few days ago that the famous trotting stallion, Black Cloud, whose brilliant performance upon the turf last season won the astonishment and admiration of horsemen, had been sold by the estate of the late Andrew Cutter, of Parma, Mich., to M. V. Wagner, Esq., Mayor of Marshall, Mich., has proven to be correct. Black Cloud is a marvel of beauty, and is perhaps one of the handsomest horses in a race that ever trotted upon the American turf, having a record of 2:174. He is large, finely proportioned, and "as black as black can be." His hair is as fine as silk, and as soft as velvet, his mane and tail are long and heavy, the latter almost touching the ground. The noble animal passes into exellent hands. The purchaser, Mayor M. V. Wagner, is not only an admirer and lover of good horses, but is also a first-class business man, of energy and enterprise. He is a large manufacturer, and is the business manager of the Voltaic Belt Co., of Marshall, Mich., whose appliances have been so persistently and skillfully adver-tised. Black Cloud has been placed in the hands of a noted Chicago driver, who will campaign him this season.

I purchased several bottles at one of our drug stores in Lynn, and began to use it as directed, and can now attend to business and am free from the pains I formerly had; and I wish to say to my friends and comrades that Hunt's Ecmedy will do all that is claimed for it, and is worthy of all praise.
